

HYSTERICAL WOMAN, RICHLY CLAD, FOUND WANDERING IN PARK

She is identified in Bellevue as
Mrs. J. S. Noonan, of Jersey City.

The discovery in Bellevue of a letter in her stocking induced a hysterical woman found in Central Park to admit early to-day that she was Mrs. J. S. Noonan, No. 117 Palisade Avenue, Jersey City.

Young, richly dressed and wearing a pearl necklace, she was found at the Terrace Bridge near the lake opposite Seventy-seventh Street about midnight by Policemen O'Rhea of the Arsenal Station.

"I am looking for God Almighty," she said.

O'Rhea persuaded her to go to the Arsenal Station, where Lieut. Farley talked with her. She refused to say anything except that her first name was Adeline, and would not let the police examine her silver mesh bag, which contained papers resembling religious tracts. She refused to remove her black silk gloves, and when any one approached her became hysterical.

Dr. McCullum of Flower Hospital ordered her sent to Bellevue, where the doctors said she was suffering from hysteria. The nurse who undressed her found the letter in her stocking and the patient then admitted it bore her name and address.

Celebrate Richard Henry Dana Centenary.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Oct. 20.—The 100th anniversary of the birth in this city of Richard Henry Dana, author of "Two Years Before the Mast," was celebrated here to-day. Under the auspices of the Cambridge Historical Society a Dana exhibition was opened in the Widener Memorial Library at Harvard University, consisting of a large collection of paintings, books, letters and other articles closely connected with the life of the famous author and lawyer.

Losses Post Estate Tax.

MARSHALL, Mich., Oct. 20.—Judge W. R. Porter, in Probate Court, to-day decided that Washington was the legal residence of Charles W. Post, the Battle Creek food manufacturer, who committed suicide last winter. Post left an estate valued at about $1,000,000. Michigan collected an inheritance tax of $125,000, and, contending that his legal residence was Battle Creek, demanded $50,000 more.
